These terms were accepted, and the appropriation was made from year to year, until the meeting of our constitutional convention in 1878, when it was incorporated in the constitution, which was overwhelmingly ratified by the people, that said appropriation should be continued in the future. It is, therefore, now a constitutional provision. Thus you see the state of Georgia has dealt liberally with the colored race. This grows out of the fact that our representatives, both in the legislature and in the convention, were obliged, in order to meet. convention, were obliged, in order to meet the requirements of their constituents, to adopt such line of policy as looks to the elevation of the colored race. This, is what

But we must not forget that the white college still has a decided advantage in this, that it gets the same appropriation annually from the state treasury that the colored college does, and its patrons, who sent their sons to it for instruction, are generally able to pay tuition; and the appropriation from the state and the tuition sustain the college. Not so with the colored race. While they have made very considerable advance in the accumulation of property, and now pay tax on between five and six millions in our state, still few of them are able to educate their children in college at their own cate their children in college at their own expense. I have taken this position ever since, as chairman of the finance communities, walking under a load of petty obligations, I saw to what hazard the credit of the city was put, and what chances were offered to the Atlanta university, which had been established been established with the stock exchange, and his career of the colored race and one for the white race; and it was agreed that the same appropriation and the same appropriated $8,000 per and the state treasury to the university at Atlanta university at the same appropriation and the sustain the college as it ought to be sustained. Indeed, it lacks a great deal of it. Of course the noble charity which conceived the idea of locating the college here is highly appreciated, but it is not supposed that its benefactors in New England can afford from year to make large donations to aid in sustaining the college. It is, therefore, very desirable, if it could possibly be done, to have the university better endowed. And I think every effort should be made that possibly can be to accomplish this object. If any man of large wealth has means to spare, and seeks a worthy object upon which to bestow it, he could nowhere find one more deserving; and I know of no place where donations to an endowment would be more highly appreciated, not only by the colored race who would be the immediate recipients, but also by the white race who wish them well and who are very anxious that the university be made in every sense a success.

While speaking of the feeling that exist between the two races, I might here remark that hundreds of thousands of southern men laid down their lives during the late unfortunate strife to sustain their view of the government, and especially to sustain slavery. And hundreds of thousands more would have made the same sacrifice if it could have resulted in success, so earnest to sustain their view of the government, and especially to sustain slavery. And hundreds of thousands more would have made the same sacrifice if it could have resulted in success, so earnest to sustain their view of the government, and especially to sustain their view of the government, and especially to sustain their time of the rice is the whole case in a nutshell. JUDGE LOCHRANE.

His Appearance Before the Missouri

Legislature. Judge O. A. Lochrane has just returned from the west, where he has been for some time, attending to his duties as attorney for the Pullman palace car company. There has been a brisk skirmish in Missouri Illinois and other western states between the legislatures and the pullman palace car company, about regulating rates of fare. It has been discussed by committees, and received the individual attention of Judge Lochrane for several weeks past. He appeared before the committee on internal improvements, in the Missouri legislature, last week and made a lengthy argument. We give below a synopsis, as it presents the whole question in a new phase. Judge Lochrane convinced the members of the committee that they could not interfere with the rates of fare. He said:

The following notaries public received their papers yesterday from the executive office: James G. Peel, tax collector of Webster county; J. L. M. Howell, sheriff of Chattahoochee county. This nearly completes the list of county officers to be commissioned.

He then made a legal argument on the patent rights of the company, which he showed could only be regulated by police power of the state, which sleeping car business was not within. He read and commented on a case from 43 Ind. Reps. 454; also, Missouri vs. The People, and made several legal citations to show patent rights were not within state regulations as to fare. He argued on the several grounds that a patent could only be used with the consent of the owner; that consent implied the right to fix terms; that this property was not devoted to public use; that patents became the property of the public only when the term of their life expired; that until then the juri private continues in the owner. only when the term of their life expired; that until then the juri private continues in the owner. He discussed the public policy involved in the question and closed with a resume of the points made and the reasonableness of fares charged considering capital employed and services and accommodations rendered.

A Long List of Improvements all Along the Line.

Is there any prettier street in Atlanta than the residence portion of Whitehall street? Beginning at the corner of Fair street it runs out to the corporate limits The city council adjourned on Monday through a series of tasty and elegant dwelnight without prying any attention to the lings that challenge the admiration of all demands of the people for sanitary protecwho pass that way. The street is well tion. But the people are determined to shaded and the liberal citizens who live on have a hearing on the subject, or at least to it have spent their money so freely in imforce upon the council the granting of some proving it that they now have cause to be proving it that they now have cause to be proud of their work. A stroll along this popular thoroughfare, after passing all the buzz and confusion of its retail shops, brings one to a quiet, modest avenue, which at 5 o clock in the evening is one of the most popular of the single walks. It is contributed rarely found in city streets. Recently the

Mr. Clayton, of the firm of Clayton & Webb, is going to build a fine residence this immediate neighborhood. Other improvements are prospective, but these are certainly soon to be completed. They will, of course, induce other invest-ments in the same quarter. We may look for Whitehall street to become prettier and rettier all the time.

The people on this street are thinking city council might do a little more toward the public improvement of a street for which private capital has done so much. The last street gas lamp is now at the junc-tion of Forsyth street, while most of the residences on the street are beyond this point. The water pipes stop at the same place.

Some of the enterprising citizens who some of the enterprising citizens who live beyond this are preparing to run, at their own expense, a pipe along the line of the street to supply themselves with water. Probably no street in the city, has improved so much in the last five years, and no street has a brighter prospect for its future.

As it is, Chief Mr. J. G. Hass, formerly of Atlanta, but now a resident of Savannah, reached this city yesterday accompanied by his beautiful bride. They were married at Savannah a few days since and have come to Atlanta on a bridal tour, and will spend the honeymoon at his old home with his numerous friends.

It is an odd thing in journalism that a paper like the Louisville Courier-Journal should have been so conducted as to necessitate the publication of a double-leaded editorial paragraph like the following: "The Courier-Journal, from this time on, will publish the local news, regardless of the appeals of interested persons. Whatever is legitimate matter of news shall be given to the public. Those who get themselves into trouble need not expect this paper to suppress its reports, kindly as we may feel toward them personally." The publication of the news, and all the news, one would think, would be matter of course, and if the conductors of the Courier-Journal have, as they confess, proceeded upon any other planterests, but also against the rights of their readers, who are entitled to have all the news. The Journal's new departure may not come too late, but the necessity for it might never have existed.

That there may be no doubt as to their quality, we, with entire confidence, guarantee them to be unsurpassed in cut, cure, delicacy of flavor and style of package by any hams in the world. We believe them y any name in the word. We betwee them inthout equal, and the universal favor with chich they have been accepted would justive this conclusion. There is no economy to there the dealer or consumer in using the heaply cured imitations when at a shade igher price the Magnolia can be observed.

We do not pretend to compete in price with the poor grades that, with high-sounding names and flaming labels, are being pressed on Southern buyers, for we cannot rnish a choice article at the price o cheaply and carelessly cured meats; but we say to all who appreciate a real delicacy, that, quality considered, even at a considerably higher figure. Magnon as are actually the cheapest. The dealer who sells Magnon has will find them more ready sale. The consumer is compensated in the excellence of flavor. Dealers can order them direct from us through Fears & Jones, Atlanta, Ga., and always at as low prices as such cure can as through rears a Jones, Atanaa, Oa., and always at as low prices as such cure can be furnished. Consumers may prevent heir grocers furnishing them poor hams at all prices, as many are inclined to do, by alling for MacNoLIAS, and thereby combelling them to keep the "best, which are dways the cheapest." ## The Best and Most Economical.

Housekeepers are giving the cheap, adulterated baking powder a "wide berth," and why? Because experience has taught then that an absolutely pure, full strength, full weight article, such as Dooley's Yeast Pow-der, which never fails to produce light, wholesome, and nutritious biscuits, rolls, muflins, wafiles, and griddle cakes of all kinds, is by far the cheapest and most
